Some of these sites might have already be shared but just in case I thought I'd share some sites that I've bookmarked:

The Supreme Court

<http://www.supremecourt.gov/>

The Supreme Court Historical Society also has some interesting material available online:

<http://www.supremecourthistory.org/>

A PBS resource on the Supreme Court

<http://www.pbs.org/wnet/supremecourt/index.html>

NY Times also has set up a web resource on the Supreme Court:

I'd include SCOTUSblog: <http://www.scotusblog.com/> . This helps with current activities, but also has other contextual entries.

Those are all good resources. I also like Balkinization: <http://balkin.blogspot.com/>
They cover mostly constitutional issues, but also other current legal matters. There's a good representation of legal scholars, and robust debate.

If your interest is in civil liberties, here's one that frequently gets me going: <http://www.huffingtonpost.com/news/the-agitator/>
This one too: <http://dissenter.firedoglake.com/>
